

Cotton-ball catapult

A six-day desk trial. Period 2, grade 8. School year 2026–27. Fifteen shop aliases. Not the live teacher desk.

The trial called the same functions the screens use: the planner, the wall job, Watch, crew marks, the family portal, and the projector deck. 58 of 59 checks passed. One product gap failed on purpose: the deck does not read the hour.

What the class was

The job was a desk catapult that throws a cotton ball four meters. The design steps were launch, draw, measure, build, test, and show. Crews were Arm, Sling, Frame, and Stop, four, four, four, and three. Ms. Hale was the aide for the period. She is not a student. Flint and Gasket were kept apart after a bench clash. A pasted legal name was minted into an alias and then dropped. It is not in the file.

A dot means not seen. A blank is not a zero. Hazel missed measure. Drift was not seen on tools. Lumen was excused from the show.

The six days

Monday 2026-09-21 · Name the launch

Ask. How do we throw a cotton ball four meters with a desk catapult?

Do. Goggles on. Sketch the problem, not the answer. The wall and the planner both opened on safety. At the bell, overdue skills were: none. 14 students took a skill mark.

Effort not a 3. Drift 2, Flint 2

Skill marks off a 3. Alder 4, Drift 2 Not seen: Flint.

Tuesday 2026-09-22 · Draw the arm

Ask. What length of arm throws farther without tipping the frame?

Do. One drawing a crewmate can build from. Sizes on the page. The wall and the planner both opened on draw. At the bell, overdue skills were: safety. 15 students took a skill mark.

Effort not a 3. Ember 2

Skill marks off a 3. Birch 4, Ember 2, Flint 2

Wednesday 2026-09-23 · Mark the range

Ask. Where is four meters, and how will we know we hit it?

Do. Tape the floor. Mark the 1 m, 2 m, and 4 m lines. The wall and the planner both opened on measure. At the bell, overdue skills were: none. 14 students took a skill mark.

Effort not a 3. Hazel A, Notch 2

Friday 2026-09-25 · Launch and change one thing

Ask. What did the first throw teach you to change?

Do. Three launches. Change one part. Throw again. Write the distance. The wall and the planner both opened on model. At the bell, overdue skills were: tools, measure. 15 students took a skill mark.

What held

Each morning the wall showed that day's question and the job, not yesterday's. Watch opened on the skill the planner pinned. Tuesday morning, safety was overdue because Flint had not been seen. The makeup wrote a 2, then the class drew. Hazel's absent day did not write a zero on measure. Lumen's excused show did not write a zero. Every skill stamp stored the school year 2026–27, which is what a later teacher would need if an alias moves on. That send is not built. Crew seats for the dated day were Arm 4, Sling 4, Frame 4, Stop 3. The aide line is Ms. Hale, not tied to a student.

What did not

The deck does not follow the hour. The projector deck is a fixed story. Its “Do this now” slide still says Technical Drawing and the small-force question. It does not read the catapult plan. The wall does. For this unit the teacher would still be talking off the wall, or retyping the deck by hand.

Friday shared Thursday's effort slot. The week stores four effort boxes, D1 through D4. Friday is a pay day and reuses D4. Drift was P on Thursday (phone, no tools mark). Friday's crew-wide “all 3s” saw that P and skipped Drift, so Friday never wrote its own mark. The Friday read still shows P. Monday the 28th is a new week, and Drift is a 3 again. Skills did not have this problem. Each skill mark has its own date.

Overdue stayed open when there was no makeup. That part worked. Hazel never got a measure mark, and Drift never got a tools mark, so those two skills were still overdue on the show day. A teacher looking at Watch would see them. Nobody in this trial went back to close them.

How this was run

A script built a private desk and walked all six dates through add-a-student, crews, the separate rule, the aide, the project, each activity, teach notes, crew marks, skill marks, student notes, the wall job, the watch queue, the family card, and the deck list. It did not publish to tw.kulibert.net and it did not touch the live roster. This sandbox has no Chrome, so this report is the function pass the screens call, not a pixel screenshot of each morning.

The one number to remember: 58 checks passed. The deck is the one that failed.
